

Many hands in the kitchen: Resource governance in Latin America

Instructions: Please answer the following questions with the help of the resource and other information you can find digitally.

1. In your city, which common resources can you identify and how are they governed?
2. Explain the differences between governing, government and governance.
3. In which cases do you think a centralized governance of natural resources can be appropriate and when do multi-actor structures should be privileged?
4. Read the cases of El Cajón and Hidroituango from page 241 of this report and compare and contrast the actors and governance arrangements set in place for each case.
5. Based on the cases presented before, pick one and suggest an alternative arrangement that can mitigate governance challenges.
